RANGEMASTER SOUND OFF

By: Tim Geiser – CRSO • www.crsotim@aol.com

No doubt, many of you may have been of the opinion that I am a bit off my rocker. I have been writing incessantly about keeping iron core & steel clad bullets off the range. And while it may turn out that I am a bit of a nut about some things, the fires going around Escondido and San Diego County as I write, tell me that the iron core bullet ban on our range is correct and proper. With the right wind conditions and a small spark, our beautiful range could quickly turn into an inferno. Check your ammo, folks! That is one Range Incident Report that I never want to write up.

Down Range safety lights are finally installed! Anytime a shooter goes down range for any reason, simply hit one of the switches located on the support poles. Flashing red strobe lights will immediately come on. When the lights are on, no one will be allowed to remove or handle any weapons or gear. This is no different from our standard “Cold Range” procedure, but now there will be an additional visual warning. Any switch will activate the system, but only the activating switch will de-activate the system. Do not make the mistake of thinking that just because you are alone there is no need to activate the lights when you go down range. Other shooters could easily arrive while you are working on your target. Remember, SAFETY first, last, and always. Of course it begs the question...What if the power goes out. The default is right back to the basic “cold range procedure”.

Target Placement always seems to be an issue. I sometimes find it hard to understand why, but it is. So with the expert help of Board Member Dick Cross, we are going to make a yeoman’s effort to provide an accurate and thorough explanation of what you can do and what you cannot do on each range. Now it will entail a small bit of effort on the part of each shooter because they will have to actually read it once or twice. However, I can assure you that the read will be so enjoyable that most of you will want to have a copy e-mailed to you for bedtime reading. Folks, we are talking read of the year! Be sure to ask for your copy!

The annual barbecue will be behind us by the time you read this. I trust you will all have had a great time. Remember that this year “Fire Safety” has more meaning than ever.
